“ Justin was brilliant and landed wonderful jobs that employed his abstract and mechanical thinking. He was super kind and loving and kept so many things that brought constant comfort to him. He was so well rounded and loved to cook, grow gardens, fish, hunt, and he loved reptiles.
I miss him so very much and will keep him in my heart until I die. He was such a creative kid and always busy. He was my soul kindred child and so much like me. I will never forget him. Love his Mom.

“ Scott and Marlene Brandon
When Justin was little he found his love in life of spiders, snakes and everything that would crawl or slither and turned them into pets.
He knew so much information about each of his “pets” he would spend much time telling you things you would never know on the Tarantula or the snake that he had just caught outside. Always exploring the world around him. He was such a great kid and gentle person that turned into an adult that we all loved . We will miss you much.

“ I recall Justin being into snakes too, not at all one of my favorite creatures! I can recall going to his house in the past and his introducing the snake (never took it out of the aquarium and I would of ran if he did), but I remember telling him no way I could havethis in my house and sleep easy. He of course said "its not harmful" and explained why, but it did not matter to me - it was still a snake! I could not get how non-Chalent he seemed to be like it was no big deal. He loved even what seemed to be the most demonic creatures and I often I had the love and knowledge for nature like he did!

“ Justin was into cars, motorcycles as long as I knew him! I had the pleasure to meet his wife Jody months back and I recall going into their home, and Justin showing off his garage /shop - it did not seem what I would say "ready to use" but then I have no idea of that stuff like he did but he seemed so happy about it!

“ When I first moved to the HEB area I recall my sister and I being at Justin's house with his then wife - he had grilled food and as we all began to conversate he told us before we left out, "I think you guys will be very happy here as we were when first moved here." He offered to help anyway could with anything needed as he knew we were both single, and he was not too far away. Justin may of been quiet at times, never a negative word and he may of been struggling with his own demons but he had a big heart!

“ I recall another time Justin and Angela came to my house for a cookout one evening and my trees needed trimmed, pruning... I was complaining about it of course (huge tree in my back yard that I have to hire help), and soon after, Justin and Angela both were graciously working on my trees. It was not what I expected, wanted or planned but I appreciated this - he was a person to help if could and he did not ask for anything in return!

“ i once was called to babysit for him and wife, so I stayed at their place while I sat with the kids and Justin and his then wife Angela went out that evening. I was given a bedtime the kids were to follow but to my surprise I lost track of time playing with Zander and Scarlett - indoors and outdoors. Zayden was trying to teach me a video game or some sort I had a hard time following because I am old and technology illiterate but Zayden told me his dad was good at this game. I got so focused on Zayden I completely lost sight of Scarlett. Before I knew it, it was somewhere near midnight I think and Scarlett entered the room covered in purple nail polish - on her body and clothes! Zayden informed me she likes to pain but it was a little late for that advice by then! I panicked because I knew Justin and Angela were coming soon so I took Scarlett to bathroom and started rubbing her down with nail polish remover. I did not realize until later it had stained a spot in the carpet too! Scarlett began complaining about the odor and Zayden was telling me repeatedly "you have to watch her with nail polish." I then decided I would take Scarlett's clothes off, have her get a bath and try to hide the evidence best I could. I asked Zayden to be my look out in the living room when mom and dad got home. I never heard the front door open, and I know it was some time after midnight but all of a sudden during Scarlett's bath, I looked up To see Justin standing at the bathroom door - he had walked by and saw us. He was laughing!! I could only hear Angela yelling at Zayden about being up past time, and directing him to get to bed. As she entered the bathroom I began explaining frantically, and the entire time I was talking Justin continued to laugh! Angela laughed too but I was scared to death! Justin commented about the fact Angie should have known not to leave the nail polish out, that Scarlett was big on painting her nails! I was so grateful he saw the humor in this, as well as Angela...I also realized I was not the greatest at being the authority figure / enforcer!
