“ Boy brother do i miss you. I have to say this is the first time i actually read your obituary. It was never given to me not even through newspaper. My mind was to set on bring lost just thinking of your passing, not believing you were now gone. Not wanting to grasp it or accept it. Let alone to think of a possible obituary already made for you. Then the yrs passed but it never got to me to thinking why I never came across yours like i did with dads and mom's. Until recently. Then I found it here. And i read all the comments of the shared memories, it just breaks my heart. To see your picture here but not your actual presence. But I'm good. And you, well are even better. Your with God now, resting in his mansion, and I'm with God now too but just haven't marked marked myself at the finish line like you already have. Someday we'll meet again. You enjoy all the eternity you can with God Dad and mom. I soon will. I miss them so dearly. I miss all three of y'all. And I can't say i miss God though cuz i haven't met him in person but boy do am i coming to know him like he already knows me. But I'll see him for the very first time like Jesus his son. They both though never leave me. They're always here 100. See y'all soon, i guess when God chooses to call me home. Love your little brother Julieta.

“ Joe was such a great person, he would call me at all times to make sure I was okay and that I didn't need anything. I wasn't surprised to see his face at the hospital the day I had my daughter on May 14th of this year. Joe didn't have any way to get me anything so he took a center piece of flowers off the dining tables in the cafeteria of the hospital. He was so proud to of brought me something. I love Joe. May he rest in peace and watch over us all in the times of need... Miss you bud.
